How a Marine Slipped His Cable.

[Original.]

Ensign Peabody should have been in the navy a hundred years ago, when the men were treated more like brutes than human beings. Instead of today, when every sailor, whether officer or seaman, has his rights. But there are natural tyrants who are by nature tyrannical, and Peabody was one of them, though he kept within the regulations, using insult instead of committing a violation of an officer's restrictions.

Tom Spencer was a marine on board a United States cruiser. He was a good soldier, always spick and span and well educated. The reason for his enlisting in the marine corps was that he hoped some day by good conduct to secure a commission. For some reason or other Peabody conceived a dislike for Spencer. Some said the reason was that Peabody had been appointed to the academy from the gutter and it had failed to make him anything but a gutter snipe, while Spencer had enlisted from the parlor and could only be a gentleman. Be this as it may, whenever Peabody got a chance to put the screws on to Spencer he did it in as irritating and disagreeable fashion as it could be done. There was a fire smoldering in Spencer's breast which nothing but the navy laws could keep from breaking out into a volcanic eruption.

There had been a liberty party on shore and some of the leave men had got into a fight with the natives—the cruiser was lying off the coast of Peru—and when they returned Peabody was officer of the deck. Spencer was one of them and gave evidence of his part in the fracas by having his uniform torn to shreds. Peabody seized upon this to storm at him, and, without getting the better of his discretion, used a common opprobrious epithet in connection with Spencer's mother. Like a flash the marine's right arm went out, and the ensign went sprawling on the deck.

Here was a case of mutiny. In some of the world's navies even in time of peace to strike an officer means death. The penalty is not so severe in the United States navy, but it means imprisonment. Spencer was put in irons and charges preferred against him. It was in the hot season, and there is no telling how long a time may elapse before a court martial. It was probable that Spencer would either be sent home under guard for trial or would be held till the cruiser went north. It was too hot to keep him from decks for an indefinite time, and he was given the liberty of the ship during the day, only being put into the brig at "pipe down." The ship's master at arms was made responsible for him and watched him to see that he didn't get away to shore. It was a grim prospect for the prisoner. The insult he had received would be no palliation for his offense. He might have preferred charges against Peabody, but on no account could he have taken the law into his hands. Instead of a commission, he would doubtless get at the least calculation dishonorable discharge and several years at some naval prison. He was the picture of woe as he lounged about and an object of sympathy with his shipmates, who hated Peabody.

Spencer, who was in the social scale far above his comrades, had but few intimate companions. His only chum was Bob Sawin, whose father was a captain of a merchant vessel. Bob was a great scapegrace and generally conceded to be the most reckless man on the cruiser.

The trouble on land had subsided and liberty parties were again going ashore. They usually left the ship at four bells in the evening. One afternoon Sawin put in an application for liberty. There was a young ensign aboard who had been ill ever since the cruiser had left United States shores, and on this very afternoon he had returned to duty and was officer of the deck. It was his part to call off the names of the liberty party.

When Sawin's name was called, Spencer, well got up in his best uniform for shore leave, stepped forward, with a "Here, sir," saluted, went down the ladder and took his place in the launch. The ensign didn't know him from any other marine. There was suppressed surprise on the faces of the men who knew well enough that Spencer was not Sawin, but never a man spoke, and when the party was checked off the cutter bore them, Spencer sitting in the stern sheets, to the dock. Meanwhile Bob Sawin was hiding under a tarpaulin on the fore-castle. There he remained till darkness spread a friendly mantle far more to the purpose, then let himself stealthily down by the anchor chains, dived, swam under water as far as he could hold his breath, came to the surface and swam to shore. The next morning he returned with the party in Spencer's uniform.

Spencer as soon as he found himself ashore made for the mountains and within a few days was lost to any searching party that might be sent for him. He had some back pay stored away in his pockets, by means of which in time he returned to the United States. He was not missed aboard ship till the master at arms hunted for him at "pipe down" to put him in the brig for the night.

When the Spanish-American war came on Spencer enlisted in the army, distinguished himself and came back a captain. Either before or after the war he succeeded in getting his naval service forgiven, so that he could be in the United States service again. This he did through a relative who was a congressman.

GEORGE DISNEY MILLS.

Obeying Orders.

[Copyright, 1907, by E. C. Parcells.]

There was a column of us riding along the highway in sets of fours when one of the cavalymen swayed, lurched and pitched from his saddle just as we heard the report of a rifle. At the edge of the cornfield twenty rods from the road was a puff of blue smoke to direct us to the bushwhacker. We had the fences down and were riding toward the spot two minutes later. War is cruel enough, but bushwhacking is simply murder. A farmer ambushed himself and fired into a column of marching men. Whether he wounds or whether he kills, the war goes on just the same. The government would feel the loss of a mule more than of a man.

"If your column is bushwhacked, find the man and hang him. If he has a home, burn it."

Those were the orders, and every man remembered them as we rode down on the bushwhacker. We found where he had knelt down to take aim, but he had disappeared. Fifteen rods up the hill was a wretched pole cabin, with the roof sinking in. It had no door at the opening and no shades at the windows. There was no floor, and the cooking was done at a rude fireplace. A girl who could not have been over eighteen and who was poorly clothed, and barefooted sat at the front door, smoking a pipe. She saw us swarming up the hill, but did not move. Our curses filled her ears a moment later, but she puffed at her pipe and looked at us indifferently.

"Where is the man who fired the shot? You heard it. You must know who it was."

"Didn't dun hear nor see nuthin'," she replied.

There was only one room in the cabin. Lying on the floor under the rude bedstead, with his gun beside him, was the man. We hauled him outdoors without resistance. The wife on the steps did not rise up nor cease to puff. She did not look at us nor at him. The man was a squatter, perhaps twenty-two years old. He was "white trash."

"Bring a rope!"

The man leaned up against an old cherry tree and looked at wife and baby. I was looking into his face all the time. It was emotionless and unreadable. Not one human sentiment swept over it. He simply stared and stared and stared.

The baby had been nursed and crooned to sleep. The woman still held it. Her pipe had been smoked out. She still retained it in her black teeth. As the free end of the rope was thrown over the limb of another tree not far away the woman seemed to look at her husband for the first time and said:

"Jed, didn't I tell you so?"

"Reckon."

"He's bushwhacked one of my men and he's got to hang!" said the officer to her.

"Told him not to."

"Will you go inside?"

"Fur why?"

"You don't want to see your own husband hung, do you?"

"I'll sit yere," she answered as she settled down.

"Now, then," said the officer to the husband, "do you want to kiss your wife and child before you go?"

I looked to see soft lines come into the man's face, but I observed not one single one. It was a face of wood or stone. He looked at the woman and at the child, and it seemed as if he had not understood. She did not even look up. I doubt if they had ever exchanged kisses. Perhaps he had never taken the infant in his arms. It seems cruel now, when peace has been upon the land for a third of a century, but blood ran hot in those days of war, and men did not stop to think. The man was walked to the other tree, the noose slipped over his head, and half a dozen pairs of hands drew him clear of the ground, his arms having been first tied behind him. He said no word and made no struggle. You would have thought that something like that had been part and parcel of his daily existence for years.

"Now we must burn the house," said the officer to the wife as the gruesome thing hung there, swaying in the breeze.

"Reckon you must," she answered as she moved aside for us to pass in.

We brought out everything and made a pile in the grass. She assisted us in no way. The baby woke up again, with a wail, but before nursing and crooning again she filled and lighted her pipe. One of the troopers gave her a match. When ordered to move, she walked away about ten yards and sat down under a bush. The old cabin was fired, and in a quarter of an hour it had disappeared. What we had carried out should have been taken away in a wheelbarrow. The provisions consisted of a small piece of bacon and about five pounds of cornmeal. The bugle blew "Attention!" and the troopers began moving down the highway. I lingered behind to say to the woman:

"Your husband is dead, your house burned down, and what will you do now?"

"Can't reckon to say," she replied in careless tones.

"Got a father and mother to go to?"

She shook her head.

"Any friends to take you in?"

Another shake.

I took out and handed her a five dollar greenback, and she was inspecting it and giggling over it when I hastened away.

AN OLD TIME ASCENT.

London's First Balloon and the Great Excitement It Raised.

Tremendous excitement was caused when London's first balloon went up. The balloon, manned by a young Italian named Vincent Lunardi, ascended from Moorfields, then an open space of ground, on Sept. 15, 1784. In the presence of more than 100,000 spectators. All business was suspended, the king himself setting the example by adjourning a cabinet council that happened to be sitting. Vast crowds followed the balloon's course, some on horseback, in carriages, on foot, mostly on foot. The Great North road, above which the balloon sailed for some distance, was a roaring river of humanity.

Many were hurt in the crush, but the only fatality recorded was the death from fright of an old country woman, who, coming out of her cottage to see what the excitement was about, beheld the balloon just above her head. On the other hand, Lunardi undoubtedly saved one man's life, a jury bringing in a verdict of not guilty on a notorious highwayman in order that they, the prisoner and the judge who was trying the case might rush out of court to see the balloon.

The aeronaut descended eventually near Ware, in Hertfordshire, where his sudden drop from the clouds was the cause of more astonishment and excitement. Many of the spectators swooned with fear, while others urged the putting of Lunardi to death there and then on the ground that he must needs be a sorcerer and in league with the evil one.

Small Necked New Yorkers.

Statistics furnished by manufacturers of shirts and collars indicate that the average New York man has a smaller neck than his out of town brother. Comparison of orders shows that out of a given volume of business booked Boston and Chicago led in the matter of big sizes. Inquiry at several haberdashery shops in Manhattan resulted in the information that any number larger than sixteen and a half would have to be specially called for from the factory or had through the selling agent. In other cities it is an everyday experience to sell as high as size eighteen over the retail counter. Of course the element of snug fit is a factor, but as a regular proposition eastern and western men are more "bull necked" than is the case with their New York brethren.—New York Press.

Dried Elderberry Leaves In Asthma.

"If you will gather leaves from an elderberry bush when they are green and let them dry and then put them into a pillow and sleep upon them nightly for about three months," said a Petersburg (Tenn.) man, "they will cure the worst case of asthma. After they are dried the leaves have a peculiar but pleasing odor. By inhaling this odor the asthma is cured. I know a number of people who cured themselves of asthma by sleeping on dried elderberry leaves."—Nashville Tennessean.

Heaven's Secrets.

The following is a true story, vouchered for by a correspondent: Her little boy of seven years of age said to her one day: "Mother, I know why it is that babies cannot speak until they are twelve months old. It is because they come straight from heaven, and if they were able to talk as soon as they were born they would tell the secrets, and so God doesn't let them speak until they have almost forgotten them."—London Methodist Times.

Not a Crank.

He—I notice you call a good many of your acquaintances cranks. I hope you do not consider me a crank? She—Certainly not! A crank is a person with one idea, and I never heard anybody accuse you of having one!—Pearson's Weekly.

A Square Deal

Is assured you when you buy Dr. Pierce's family medicines—for all the ingredients entering into them are printed on the bottle-wrappers and their formulas are attested under oath as being complete and correct. You know just what you are paying for and that the ingredients are gathered from Nature's laboratory, being selected from the most valuable native medicinal roots found in our American forests and while potent to cure are perfectly harmless even to the most delicate women and children. Not a drop of alcohol enters into their composition. A much better agent is used than for extracting and preserving the medicinal principles used in them, viz., pure grape-fruit essence. This agent possesses intrinsic medicinal properties of its own, being a most valuable antiseptic and antiferment, nutritive and soothing demulcent.

Glycerine plays an important part in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia and weak stomach, attended by sour risings, heartburn, foul breath, coated tongue, poor appetite, gnawing feeling in stomach, biliousness and kindred derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels. Besides curing all the above distressing ailments, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a specific for all diseases of the mucous membranes, as catarrh, whether of the nasal passages or of the stomach, bowels or pelvic organs. Even in its ulcerative stages it will yield to this sovereign remedy if its use be persevered in. In Chronic Catarrh of the Nasal passages, it is well, while taking the "Golden Medical Discovery" for the necessary constitutional treatment, to cleanse the passages freely two or three times a day with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. This thorough course of treatment generally cures the worst cases.

In coughs and hoarseness caused by bronchitis, throat and lung affections, except consumption in its advanced stages, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most efficient remedy, especially in those obstinate, long-continued coughs caused by irritation and congestion of the bronchial mucous membranes. The "Discovery" is not so good for acute coughs arising from sudden colds, nor must it be expected to cure consumption in its advanced stages—no medicine will do that—but for all the obstinate, chronic coughs, which, if neglected, or badly treated, lead up to consumption, it is the best medicine that can be taken.

Women as Jurors.

The probability of our having some day women sitting on juries is looked on with sanguine expectation by women themselves and with no little degree of skepticism by men who await with interest the outcome of experiment in this direction. It is generally conceded that women are now being schooled for just such duties and the old objection to feminine sentiment as a bar to unbiased judgment is fast passing away. Whether or not a jury composed entirely of women would ever agree is a matter of humorous speculation, but nothing seems to approach more nearly to an ideal body of justice dispensers than does the possibility of a mixed jury.

The high ideals of woman would bring about the uplifting of justice if she could dispense it and she would be of particular value in the juvenile courts. Her intuition would be of incalculable value to her and if the bias of sentiment should color her verdicts it were far preferable to the many biases which guide men in the pronouncing of their judgments.

Public opinion is today moulded as much by women as by men, and education, business life and club affairs are fast making her eligible for jury duty. There is no danger that women on trial would be favored by women juries for it is a well-known fact that women are hard on their own sex and female criminals would never be accorded the consideration which is now granted to them by the gallant sex. Several recent cases wherein women were involved and on trial for their lives fail to reveal a single conviction. Man condemned the ways of his fellows and held their sins to be deserving of the enactment of the "unwritten law." There are mitigating circumstances which way down in our hearts seem to justify some such acquittals and to add glory to man, confuting all accusations as to his innate selfishness, but on the other hand too many women as criminal as criminal can be are let go on their way to propagate a defective species. Women on juries would remedy much of the evil resulting from the imposition on man's gallantry in the jury box.

Our Remote Past.

One can scarcely be humdrum,
As along this world we hum,
Fairly rushing whither not we know;
For we spend much time inquiring
Into theories which admiring
We hope will solve the mystery where we go.

A thousand different theories,
And a thousand different cults,
And all a little probable 'tis true
Besiege our kind attention
And perhaps I ought to mention
The past we're also urged to please review.

Not satisfied just whither
We are going or why hither,
Some wise ones now suggest our remote past;
Incarnation is amusing,
And yet it's quite amusing
To imagine who you were when you lived last.

Really one should be indulgent,
For in the past refulgent
The editor, for instance, might have been
A delinquent old subscriber,
Or a trolley system briber,
Or a candidate that didn't always win.

Now it behooves all old maids
To believe that in those fond glades,
Where once they dwelt, it really was their lot
To have been the queen romantic
Of a king who drove them frantic,
It's a comforting philosophy, though rot.

Jack London's "Before Adam,"
Shows that once he really had 'em;
But since that time, we venture to suggest,
Prize-fighter and explorer
Followed that existence lower;
To that "The Game" and "Snark" do both attest.

Luther Burbank's pre-existence
We dwell on with insistence,
He must have been the victim of a seed,
And passed with 'pendicities
To this land where he delights us
With the seedless fruits from deadly danger freed.

Ruef must have worn a toga
Before he was a roguia,
And levied tribute on the Latin race;
Perhaps Schmitz played for Nero,
Detective Burns played hero
Before the dawn of Frisco's graft disgrace.

The learned Dr. Wheeler,
Who is now a gifted spieler,
Was once called Scipio perhaps.
Wanderlust was his affection,
Even now of his selection,
To his old ways he often doth relapse

Perhaps Bill Hearst and Bryan
Were soldiers under fire
In prehistoric combats we regret;
There's something there persisting,
See their precincts they're still listing,
In the past they died, but they are running yet.

Father Leahy Leaves for the Old Country.

Rev. Father Leahy, pastor of St. Francis' church, whose health has been quite poor ever since being operated upon for an abscess of the ear about a year ago, is now well on his journey to the home of his mother in Ireland, where he goes for rest and recreation. The reverend gentleman had been contemplating the trip for some time but unforeseen obstacles delayed his departure until last Saturday. He will be absent for some time. Rev. Father O'Brien, who has temporarily taken Father Leahy's place, occupied the pulpit last Sunday. He is a popular priest and a well-informed and highly educated gentleman.

For Rheumatic Sufferers

The quick relief from pain afforded by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm makes it a favorite with sufferers from rheumatism, sciatica, lame back, lumbago, and deep seated and muscular pains. For sale by L. S. Simmons.

NOW IS BEST TIME TO TAKE.

Directions to Prepare Simple, Yet Remarkable Home Mixture.

A well-known authority on rheumatism gives the readers of a large New York daily paper the following valuable yet simple and harmless prescription which any one can easily prepare at home:

One-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Mix by shaking well in a bottle and take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

He states that the ingredients can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy at small cost, and being of vegetable extraction, are harmless to take.

This pleasant mixture, if taken regularly for a few days, is said to overcome almost any case of rheumatism. The pain and swelling, if any, diminishes with each dose, until permanent results are obtained, and without injuring the stomach. While there are many so-called rheumatism remedies, patent medicines, etc., some of which do give relief, few really give permanent results, and the above will, no doubt, be greatly appreciated by many sufferers here at this time.

Inquiry at the drug stores of this neighborhood elicits the information that these drugs are harmless and can be bought separately, or the druggists here will mix the prescription for our readers if asked to.

Christian Endeavor Social.

A very enjoyable social was given by the members of the Christian Endeavor Society in the Sunday School room of the M. E. Church last Thursday evening. First on the program was a shadow pantomime. This was followed by a vocal solo, "Those Songs my Mother Used to Sing," Ramona Granice; recitation, Enid Day; vocal solo, "Won't you be my Baby Boy," Gladys Simmons; recitation, little Miss Johanssen; vocal solo, Mr. Coleman; sacred duet, Rev. and Mrs. Day; song, Mrs. K. R. Rowe. Among the numbers on the program deserving of especial mention was a poppy song, rendered by Wilma Hocker, Helena Volquardsen, Zolita Bates, Carrie McKoon and Marian Russell. The little girls appeared in costumes representing the California poppy. Following the program there was a guessing contest, refreshments and playing of games. The affair brought out many of the parents of the children and friends of the society.

Brief Mention.

Daunt does the only reliable watch repairing.

Any repair work left at Mrs. Lutgen's will receive prompt attention by Daunt.

Now is the time to lay concrete sidewalks. See Trudgen, the stone mason, about it.

The Rev. Padre Giovanni Rosa, missionary to the Italian people in Sonoma and environs, including Glen Ellen and Kenwood, opening March 8, and continuing for one week. It will include Holy Mass, daily, at 7 A. M. Instruction at 3:30 for children and at 7:15 P. M. Rosary, Instruction and Benediction for all. A most earnest and cordial invitation is extended to every one who understands the Italian language.

D. Di Grazia & Co., have opened a sausage factory opposite the Lombardo Hotel in this place. They will keep a fine line of sausages, sardines, olive oil and cheeses, both foreign and domestic. This new enterprise should be encouraged by our people, as should every new business started in the town. Spend your money at home and Sonoma is bound to keep on growing.

Spring Medicine

The best is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is the best because it does the most good. While it makes the blood pure, fresh and lively, it tones the stomach to better digestion, creates an appetite, stimulates the kidneys and liver, gives new brain, nerve and digestive strength.

An unequaled list of cures—40,366 testimonials in two years—proves its merit.

Sarsaparilla—For those who prefer medicine in tablet form, Hood's Sarsaparilla is now put up in the small liquid form. Sarsaparilla have identical the same curative properties as the liquid form, besides accuracy of dose, convenience, economy, there being no loss by evaporation, breakage, or leakage. Sold by druggists or sent by mail, C. I. Hood Co., Lowell, Mass.

ROY STOCKWELL'S BAIL BOND RAISED.

Enters Plea of Not Guilty to Charge of Burglary—Trial Set for April 6th.

Roy Stockwell, charged with burglarizing Jas. Modini's "Dew Drop Inn" in this place last month, was arraigned in Judge Seawell's department of the Superior Court Monday. He entered a plea of not guilty to the charge and his trial was set for April 6th. Judge Seawell then made an order that Stockwell's bail bond be raised from $250 to $500 and that the accused be ordered into the custody of Sheriff Jack Smith.

A new bond was then filed in the sum of $500 with the following sureties: B. E. Darling, A. M. Thomson, A. Pinelli, G. S. Harris, T. J. McGinnsey and Wm. Trudgen, and young Stockwell released from the custody of the Sheriff.

Attorney Frank Sprague of this place appeared for the accused and District Attorney Clarence F. Lea represented the prosecution in the proceedings.

Died at El Verano.

A. Peterson died at El Verano Villa last Saturday night of consumption. The deceased, who was an entire stranger in this valley, registered at the villa a few days previous to his death and stated that he was from Oakland. He was in the last stages of consumption and came here in the hopes that a change of climate would prolong his life. The deceased was a native of Sweden and aged about fifty years. He was possessed of sufficient means to give him a decent burial. The remains were interred in Valley cemetery on Monday.

N. Bogunda Injured.

N. Bogunda, a well-known and prosperous farmer of Sears' Point, met with a painful accident on Friday of last week. While at work in his dairy house he slipped and fell through an opening on the first floor and landed on the cement floor below. His shoulder was badly bruised and his head severely lacerated. Immediately after the accident Mr. Bogunda was taken to Petaluma to have his injuries attended to by a surgeon. He was able to return to his home Saturday and is getting along nicely.

Has Cast His Crutches Aside.

G. Masciorini, the well-known dairyman of Sears' Point, who was kicked by a horse and had a leg broken a couple of months ago, has so far recovered as to be able to use the limb without the aid of crutches and now walks from his home to the postoffice and back, a distance of a quarter of a mile, with little difficulty.

Case of Varioloid.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Mor-mora located in the extreme northern part of town was quarantined one day this week by order of the local Board of Health. Delia, the ten-year-old daughter of the family, was stricken down on Friday of last week with what her attending physician, Dr. Thomson, pronounced a mild case of varioloid, hence the prompt action of the health board. This is the first case of varioloid reported since the recovery of the Misses Chase several months ago, although several cases of chicken pox among small children have been under treatment.

Men's Wear and Shoes for All

Wise Talks by the Office Boy Repeated.

A man ran an ad in the New York Sunday papers stating that on receipt of one dollar he would send in a sealed envelope a receipt for saving gas bills. A merchant who sent a dollar received a slip of paper upon which was printed, "Paste them neatly in a scrap book." There is a familiar name that you should not only paste in your scrap book, but every man should see that it's pasted in his hat and that's "Kuppenheimer." That name on a suit means good stuff and your money back if you want it. My boss believes that if a merchant advertises the sober, plain truth, it will hold customers stronger than all the "hot air" gush that ever happened; that is one of the nice things about such clothing as we have; the quality is so good, and the make and fit so perfect that they need no "con game" to make them sell. And right here let me tell you that we will new spring suits are in and we will be glad if you come in and try on some of them. Grays, browns and blues are still the vogue and we have them for you.
